Peach Page

Blinded by Moonlight

A second chance for romance fuels this fine first novel by Patti Callahan Henry. In Losing the Moon (Penguin Group, $12.95), two devoted lovers split under mysterious circumstances but meet again more than 20 years later. They are reunited by—of all people—her son and his daughter, who are dating each other unaware of their parents' past. The relationship between Amy (an architectural historian) and Nick (who has an interest in wildlife preservation) seems destined for rekindling, but what about the separate lives and families they've built in the meantime?
